Chuddy Bros. Pictures presents:

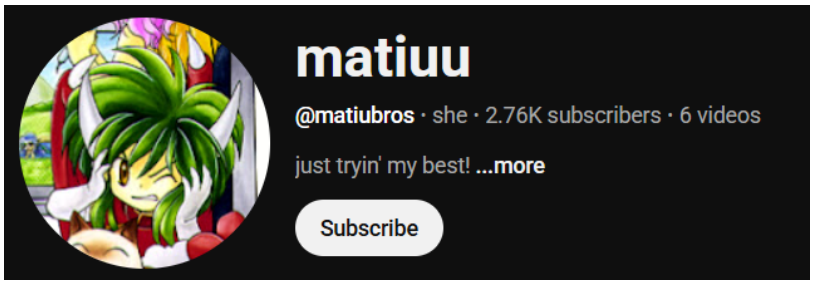
Please do not harass anybody covered in this doc.



For readers unfamiliar with the subject, matiubros (also known as matiuu) is a content creator primarily active within the Friday Night Funkin' modding community. Her work largely consists of remixing and rearranging music from high-profile mods, most notably Vs. Sonic.exe and Mario's Madness. She is particularly recognized for her involvement with the Shuffle AU, where she previously served as a director and contributed as a composer on multiple tracks associated with the project.

One of her most widely circulated works is Sonic Smackdown, a Sonic the Hedgehog–themed remix derived from MARIO MADNESS [V2], originally composed by Smash Bandicoot. This remix drew additional attention due to the contentious reputation of the original composer, whose presence in the remixing and modding community has long been a source of controversy.

For context, Smash Bandicoot was a YouTuber best known for producing Undertale and Friday Night Funkin'-related content, including uploads connected to Vs. Sonic.exe (Mario Mix). Over time, he became widely regarded as a highly controversial figure. Numerous allegations and documented incidents surrounding him include the promotion of extreme and bigoted views (including directly supporting Nazi ideologies), repeated public conflicts with other creators, and involvement in serious criminal accusations, including the distribution of illicit material or doxxing of other user's personal information. These issues ultimately led to his broader condemnation from the mixing community, and is why most of his content today is shared only through reuploads via third parties.

For readers seeking a more detailed breakdown of Smash Bandicoot's history, conduct, and the controversies surrounding him, additional documentation and coverage can be found at the following sources:

On December 26, 2025, matiubros was exposed for actively participating in a private Discord server centered around an unofficial revival of Smash Bandicoot's Mario Mix, a project derived from the work of Smash Bandicoot, who has stated above been broadly discredited and condemned within the community. Much of the evidence cited in this document originates from that server. Her involvement aligns with a documented pattern of continued engagement with Smash Bandicoot-related content, including activity on a secondary channel referred to as "matiu's slop factory, " where much of this material has been hosted.

An example of the content hosted on her channel, most of which is comprised of instrumentals and remixes of Smash Bandicoot's content

The more serious issue, however, lies in her behavior within this environment. The server included multiple individuals already associated with prior controversies, including Bread108 (see: Bread Document) and Dakota and Jay, who has been connected to the Goonsday /

Spinning Lit Clubhouse incident (see: Goonsday/Spinning Lit Clubhouse PSA). Despite the reputations of these individuals, matiubros remained active and comfortable in this space.

Server logs and private messages further demonstrate a pattern of overt hostility toward her own collaborators, specifically members of the Shuffle AU development team. In messages unearthed from the server, she repeatedly derides her teammates as immature, accuses them of overreacting to criticism, and frames herself as unfairly burdened by their reactions. She expresses explicit contempt for both internal collaborators and external critics, stating an intention to block members of the Shuffle team entirely and remove herself from the project and community in a dismissive and aggressive manner. These statements were made behind her team's backs, without any attempt at direct communication or resolution.

Additional messages captured in the screenshots reveal casual use of insults and sexually derogatory language directed at other community members, including artists and other members of Shuffle. These remarks were made flippantly, often in response to praise given to others, and suggest resentment toward peers' recognition or success. The tone across these exchanges is consistently hostile, contemptuous, and unprofessional. She specifically targets Tsuki/Mobby, another member of the Shuffle dev team and creator of Mario Mixtape, through consistent bickering, harassment, and bullying.

She has also been known to harbor other controversial figures in the mixing community, such as FomoFrop. This includes appointing him to admin in her discord server, and contributing to his Mario Mix, Mario Collection/Mario.BROS.

the people on the shuffle dev team are extremely corny and overreact to everything the haters are always saying complete nonsense everyone is wrong. I just want to get out of this shitty community already”

“I’d rather just stay in the shadows”

“im going to block all of them
from shuffle
and get the hell out of here”

This screenshot is the one described above, with her deriding her team for supposedly being corny and overreacting to everything. She also talks about the haters, and notes how she wants to leave the community already. She states her desire to aggressively cut contact with the other devs and run away.

good
but it could have been better.
i could have done better.
but i got lazy jajajaj
drawing of what

Matiuu expressing her feelings about BS Superstar Saga, a recently released project from the Shuffle AU. While it is important to note that this is simply her opinion (and shall be respected by the Chuddy Bros.), her later sentiment of “I could have done better” expresses a narcissistic point of view.

“HOW ENJOYABLE HAHAHA IT WAS SHIT”

“and in a victim #1 all messed up”

“now it has quality but the people are shit”

It is unknown what topic they are discussing, but it is likely BS Superstar Saga, seeing as this conversation took place days after the song’s premiere. She notes that while it has quality now, she states “the people are shit”, implying the dev team who made the song.

se paso se paso con ryan la otra vez

“i was the idiot who made everyone hate zeebee”

“lowk kind of justified jejeje
she went too far with ryan the other day”

This shows Matiuu approving hate on zeebeethedog, another director of the Shuffle AU project. She talks about an incident with Ryan111Pro, another user who used to create Smash Bandicoot content. As Zeebee is staunchly opposed to Smash Bandicoot content, she had a small public feud with him before eventually setting things straight, and now they work together semi-frequently on projects (notable You Must Die (You Can’t Run Mario Mix)). Not only was she approving hate on one of her close colleagues, she tried to justify it using an old and resolved incident.

“YEAH”

“fucking idiot”
“YES”

She talks about how she thinks Smash Bandicoot wasn’t transphobic, and simply hated Zeebee and Mobby (a frequent target of mockery for Matiuu). However, Smash has actually expressed transphobic viewpoints before on his YouTube channel community page (now deleted), as well as in arguments with others. They also address another user derogatively, supposedly for “wanting to be a saint.”

Genuine question:
If Trans Women are indeed women, and Trans Men are really men, why would we have to ALWAYS reassure and reclarify that they are such?
Do we ever even remotely think of saying "White women are women"? do we ever think of ever saying "Black women are women"? no, because their femininity and womanhood is unquestionable and undoubtable.
So tell me then, how are "Trans women" women, if we ALWAYS have to reclarify and reassure the entire human race that they are such every single second of every single day of every single week of every single month, of every single year, of every single decade? doesn't that by default already prove that something's wrong?

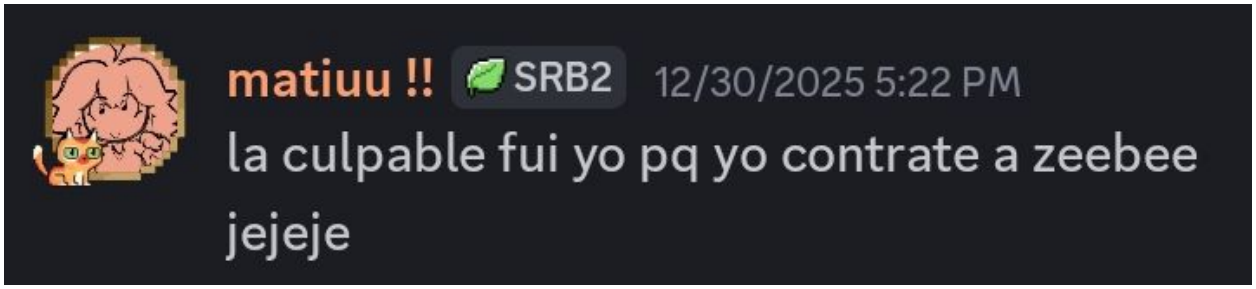
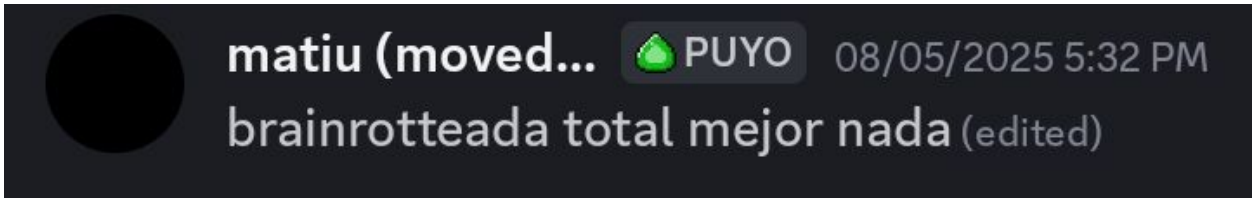
Matiuu derogatively referring to Tsuki’s (Mobby’s) Mario Mix, specifically based on the M A R I O creepypasta, and crudely insulting her in a similar way to Stumps.

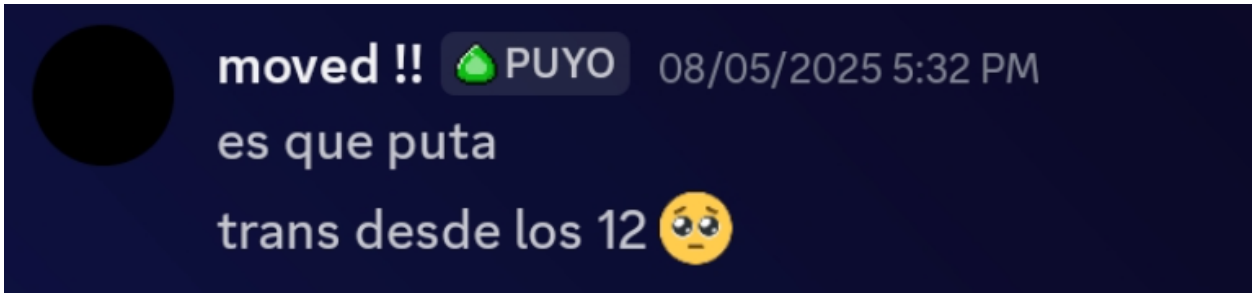


“t was my fault because I hired Zeebee hehehe”
Matiuu expressing regret for hiring Zeebee, as she was the one who stopped the team from creating any more Smash Bandicoot content.



“Total brain rot, better nothing”

Matiuu referring to someone as being brainrotted. This is possibly referring to Tsuki, for being transgender.



“is that whore
trans since 12 🥹”

Matiuu poking fun at an individual for being transgender at a young age, and this appears to be directed at Tsuki.

Matiuu admitting that she would forgive Smash Bandicoot, despite all of his past controversies and behavior.

Message @matiuu

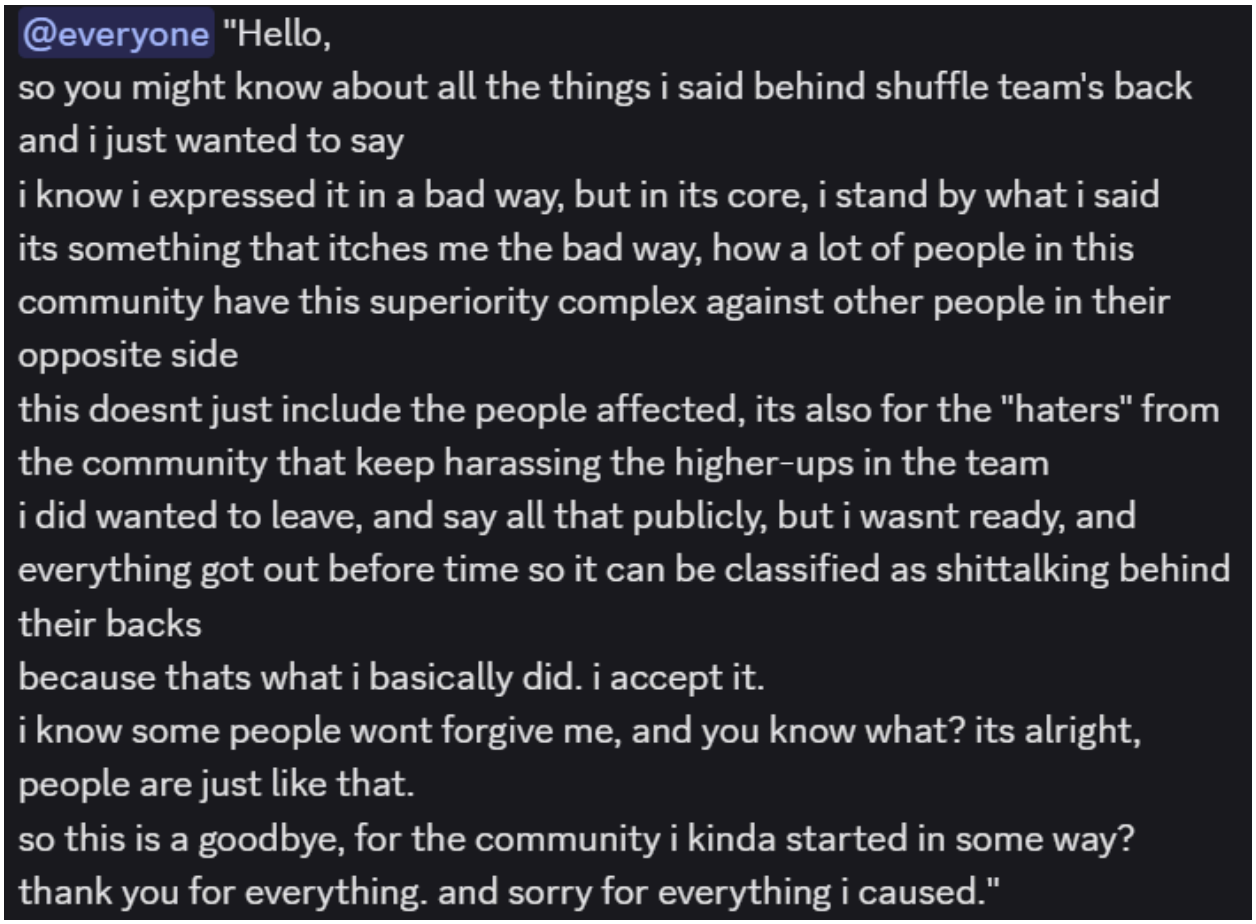
Later that same day, Matiuu issued an apology to those who were involved in the situation.



@everyone "Hello,
so you might know about all the things i said behind shuffle team's back and i just wanted to say i know i expressed it in a bad way, but in its core, i stand by what i said its something that itches me the bad way, how a lot of people in this community have this superiority complex against other people in their opposite side this doesnt just include the people affected, its also for the "haters" from the community that keep harassing the higher-ups in the team
i did wanted to leave, and say all that publicly, but i wasnt ready, and everything got out before time so it can be classified as shittalking behind their backs because thats what i basically did. i accept it.
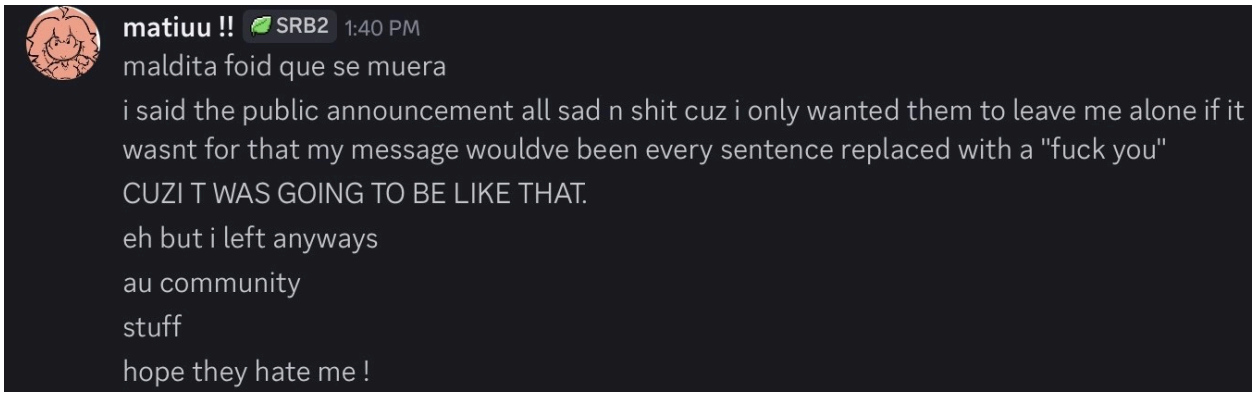
i know some people wont forgive me, and you know what? its alright, people are just like that.
so this is a goodbye, for the community i kinda started in some way?
thank you for everything. and sorry for everything i caused."

While initially appearing as a solid apology and farewell message, there are multiple flaws in its structuring and messaging. She admits to shittalking the other members of Shuffle, and yet stands by what she said regardless of how it affected the team. The apology then shifts focus to the community's "superiority complex" and "haters," which sounds more like a critique than a reflection. It feels like Matiuu is justifying her actions rather than owning up to them. Saying "everything got out before time" implies the issue was timing, referring to how it was leaked instead of officially released, not the behavior itself. A good apology includes a desire to make amends or learn from the situation. This one ends with a farewell, which feels more like an exit than a resolution.

If I'm being honest, I do get her frustrations with the mixing community. However, this isn't the same as airing out grievances to a friend or venting support group, this is actively badmouthing and conspiring against your own teammates and planning to ditch the community she helped to create and flourish.

She then later takes back the entire apology in secret.



matiuu !! SRB2 1:40 PM
maldita foid que se muera
i said the public announcement all sad n shit cuz i only wanted them to leave me alone if it wasnt for that my message wouldve been every sentence replaced with a "fuck you" CUZI T WAS GOING TO BE LIKE THAT.
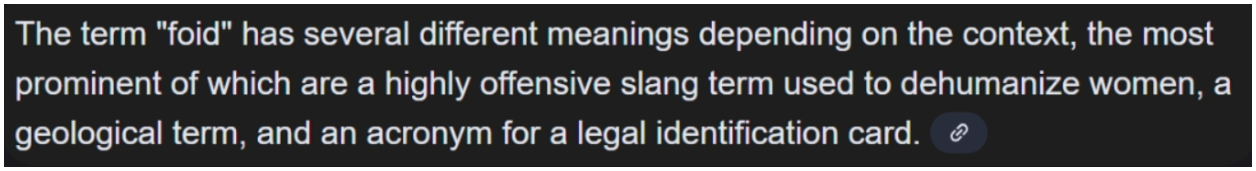
eh but i left anyways
au community
stuff
hope they hate me !

“Damn foid, may it die”

She regrets softening up the message, and intends to burn bridges and invoke rejection of the AU Mixing community. It directly contradicts the earlier tone of remorse, suggesting the apology was performative or strategic (“i only wanted them to leave me alone”). The message undermines the entire tone of the message, revealing it was only a ploy to get the members of the community to leave her alone.

The word used in the first message, “foid”, is commonly used as a highly offensive slang word used to dehumanize women. This is directly targeted at Tsuki.



The term "foid" has several different meanings depending on the context, the most prominent of which are a highly offensive slang term used to dehumanize women, a geological term, and an acronym for a legal identification card.
